NOVA Joins National Job Center Initiative

Sunnyvale, Calif.— NOVA, the local workforce development organization, has become part of the America's Job Center of California network of one-stop career centers in a re-branding effort led by the U.S. Department of Labor. The California network is Sacramento's nod to the DOL initiative to brand the nearly 3,000 federally funded employment centers nationwide to provide an easily identifiable way for individuals and businesses to access services.

The CONNECT Job Seeker Center, a partnership of workforce preparation organizations under the leadership of the NOVA Workforce Board and the local Employment Development Department, will now become the NOVA Job Center to reflect its membership in the America's Job Center of California network. "We are excited to join this coordinated approach while continuing to deliver the highest quality of services to our customers," said NOVA director Kris Stadelman.

NOVA Job Center will continue to offer its nationally recognized services for job seekers, including job search workshops, career advising, networking groups, access to computers, training assistance, on-site employer recruitment sessions, and more. All services are at no cost to job seekers. For more information, visit novaworks.org.
